NYPIRG's REVIEW OF POLITICAL PARTIES' CAMPAIGN COMMITTEES AND HOUSEKEEPING ACCOUNTS

"Life of the Parties" Report Examines The Biggest Contributors To The Major Political Parties Between 2022 and the First Half of 2026

Albany, NY – NYPIRG today released its review of campaign contributions and donations to the state's Democratic and Republican political committees. These are the obscure political committees that receive contributions and donations for the state political parties and the legislative conferences. These committees were not touched by the lower contribution limits enacted in recent years.

New Yorkers are allowed to contribute up to $138,600 to these committees and that money can be transferred to a candidate running for office. That transfer is not subject to any contribution limit, so party committees can effectively circumvent candidates' limits. Moreover, the party committees' "housekeeping" accounts allow donations of any amount. While this money cannot be used to advance and political candidacy, it can be used for all of the support work necessary to raise those contributions (e.g., office space, staff, polling, voter registration efforts, etc.).

NYPIRG's report examined the sources of funding for these political committees during the four calendar years plus of the Hochul Administration. What NYPIRG found is striking: powerful and wealthy special interests pour money into these party committees and usually these interests have business before the government.

NYPIRG's report, Life of the Parties, found:

Finding #1: Democrats received the dominant share of contributions and donations made to the state and legislative political party committees. Of the nearly $117 million in campaign contributions to the political party committees, the six Democratic campaign committees received over $84 million (72%). The Republican committees received nearly $33 million. Of the nearly $43 million donated to the political party committees' "housekeeping" accounts, the six Democratic campaign committees received nearly $33 million (77%). The Republican committees received $9.8 million. In every instance, Democratic committees dominated their Republican committee counterparts.

Finding #2: For the period we examined, among the largest sources of contributions and donations made to the state and legislative political party committees, were those that had business before government, with Political Action Committees (PACS) being the largest. PACs are almost always organized to provide electoral "punch" to groups that lobby state government. Moreover, "housekeeping" accounts saw significant donations from business interests, which also seek government favors.

Finding #3: Transfers from other political committees also made up a significant share of the contributions and donations. The most notable were the transfers from the Nassau County Republican Committee to the State Republican Committee. In each of the years reviewed, the Nassau County Republican Committee was the biggest donor to the state party. Of the $22.4 million raised in campaign contributions by the State Republican Committee, $8.6 million (38%) originated from the Nassau County Republican Committee.

NYPIRG recommends:

Recommendation #1: Lower Campaign Contribution Limits to Party Committees. The median income for a family of four in New York is the same as the campaign contribution limit to political party committees. Who can write checks of that size? Most states have some sort of reasonable limit on the size of contributions to party committees, New York should too.

Recommendation #2: Place Limits on Donations to "Housekeeping Accounts." Allowing donations of any size to the political parties most likely has as much influence on elected officials as "hard" money campaign contributions. In addition, businesses use these accounts to circumvent campaign contributions limits to candidates. Placing new, low, limits on "housekeeping accounts" should add a check on the influence that donors may have.

Recommendation #3: Restrict The Amounts Party Committees Can Transfer to Candidate Committees. The political parties should face the same campaign contribution limits as PACs.

Recommendation #4: Place Unique and Lower Campaign Contribution Limits for Lobbyists and Those Seeking Government Contracts. New York City has such a system for vendors, which should be expanded to the state. Many states place restrictions on lobbyists; New York should follow suit.

Recommendation #5: Require campaign and housekeeping donors to report their employers in the same manner as done for federal and New York City contributions.

The New York Public Interest Research Group Fund (NYPIRG) is a non-partisan, nonprofit, research and public education organization. NYPIRG was founded in 1976 as an independent 501(c)(3) public outreach and education sister organization to the New York Public Interest Research Group.

Over the decades, we have educated hundreds of thousands of New Yorkers and recruited tens of thousands of community-based members from all parts of the state, enhancing NYPIRG's institutional impact and helping to bring the voices of average New Yorkers to public policy debates.

NYPIRG's full-time staff examines important issues, produces studies, and engages New Yorkers in public education campaigns designed to produce policies that strengthen democracy, enhance the rights of consumers and voters, and protect the environment and public health.

"The Life Of The Parties"
A Review Of Contributions To The State Political Parties From January 2022 Through June 2026

SUMMARY

New York State's campaign finance system has been long viewed as one of the most lax in terms of its contribution limits, disclosure requirements, and enforcement. Over the past decade, measures have been taken to improve the program. The state established a voluntary small donor match program; it limited the use of the notorious "LLC" loophole; and, lowered its sky-high campaign contribution limits to those running for state office.

These lower limits apply only to candidates for office. The obscure political committees that receive contributions and donations for the state political parties and the legislative conferences were not touched by the lower limits. New Yorkers are allowed to contribute up to $138,600 to these committees and that money can be transferred to a candidate running for office. That transfer is not subject to any contribution limit, so party committees can effectively circumvent candidates' limits. Moreover, the party committees' "housekeeping" accounts allow donations of any amount. While this money cannot be used to advance and political candidacy, it can be used for all of the support work necessary to raise those contributions (e.g., office space, staff, polling, voter registration efforts, etc.).

This report examines the sources of funding for these political committees during the four plus calendar years of the Hochul Administration. What we find is striking: powerful and wealthy special interests pour money into these party committees and usually these interests have business before the government. We assume that the donations are a way to "pay" to "play" for policy favors.

SUMMARY OF FINDINGS

Finding #1: Democrats received the dominant share of contributions and donations made to the state and legislative political party committees. Of the nearly $117 million in campaign contributions to the political party committees, the six Democratic campaign committees received over $84 million (72%). ## SUMMARY OF RECOMMENDATIONS

Recommendation #1: Lower Campaign Contribution Limits to Party Committees. The median income for a family of four in New York[1] is the same as the campaign contribution limit to political party committees. ## "The Life Of The Parties"
A Review Of Contributions To The State Political Parties From January 2022 Through June 2026

Finding #1: Democrats received the dominant share of contributions and donations made to the state and legislative political party committees. As seen below, in each of the calendar years, and in each of the type of party committee, Democrats raised significantly more than Republicans. It is clear that when it comes to these not-very-public political committees, money flows to power.

New York State Democratic Committee

As seen below, a small percentage of the contributors to the New York Democratic State Committee represents roughly half of all donations.

New York State Republican Committee

As seen below, a small percentage of the contributors to the New York Republican State Committee represents an overwhelming percentage of all donations. Notably, the Nassau County Republican Committee was a big player, totaling 38% of all campaign contributions to the committee.

New York State Senate Democratic Campaign Committee

The State Senate Democrats too benefited hugely from a small percentage of campaign contributors as well as donors to the "housekeeping" account.

New York State Senate Republican Campaign Committee

Albeit on a smaller scale, the Senate Republicans also relied on a small number of contributors.

New York State Democratic Assembly Campaign Committee

The political committee of the Assembly Democrats did well with a small percentage of donors.

New York State Republican Assembly Campaign Committee

The trend holds true for Assembly Republicans as well.

NEW YORK STATE'S CAMPAIGN FINANCE SYSTEM

New York's candidates rely heavily on getting enormous financial support from a small fraction of the state's population – typically those businesses, associations, unions and individuals with the money to fund elections and a stake in the outcome of state decision-making. As a result, outside of its newly-established voluntary system that allows a small donor match, New Yorkers are presented with a system that is largely underwritten by the wealthy and powerful, rather than one supported by the overwhelming number of citizens who do not get directly involved in political campaigns.

New York has long been on notice about the failure of its state's campaign finance law. Over thirty years ago, the final report of the Commission on Government Integrity was issued. The Commission's report condemned New York's lax ethical standards, calling them "disgraceful" and "embarrassingly weak." The Commission then scolded state leaders for failing to act: "Instead partisan, personal and vested interests have been allowed to come before larger public interests."[5]

[5] New York State Commission on Government Integrity, "Restoring the Public Trust: A Blueprint for Government Integrity," Volume 1, December 1988.

Corruption scandals at the state and local government levels led to the creation in 1987 by then-Governor Mario Cuomo of a Moreland Act Commission to investigate ethics laws. The Commission on Government Integrity, led by then-Fordham Law School Dean Feerick and other luminaries including former U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, was charged by then-Governor Cuomo with examining the way political business was conducted in New York State and developing a blueprint for reform.[6]

The Commission issued 22 reports on a wide range of state and local ethics practices and held 17 public hearings, including one in which the governor and attorney general testified on their fundraising practices. This Moreland Act Commission issued a wide range of recommendations, including for ethics reforms, campaign finance changes, and other measures to bolster public accountability of state government.

Until recently, over the course of the past three decades no steps had been taken to overhaul the state's campaign finance system. Indefensibly high contribution "limits," coupled with weak disclosure requirements and inadequate enforcement, created a system that cries out for change, starting with the need for establishing a voluntary system of public financing.

The 1980s Moreland Commission did examine contributions to parties' committees. It concluded:

> "The investigation resulted in this report, issued in August, 1988, which detailed how torrents of money, unrestrained by real limits, pour from corporations, PACs and unions into the coffers of Democratic and Republican legislative campaign committees, and how top legislative leaders control the committees' swollen purses, funneling large sums to hotly contested races and transferring lesser amounts to the campaigns of incumbents seeking reelection to "safe" seats. The Commission found that this creates an unhealthy climate of indebtedness, with some candidates owing their success to party leaders who are in turn dangerously dependent on large contributions from special interests and those doing business with the government."[7]
> [emphasis added]

As seen in our review, that criticism is still all too valid today.

Recommendation #1: Lower political parties committees' campaign contribution limits

[6] Executive Order No. 88-1, created The New York State Commission on Government Integrity, issued on April 21, 1987.

[7] New York State Commission on Government Integrity, "Final Report," September 1990.

New York State relies on private donations to fund its political campaigns. As mentioned above, New York dramatically lowered contributions that can be made to candidates for political office. The maximum contribution for statewide office is $18,000. And while that is down significantly from the past ($47,100 in the general), it is still well above the national average of $6,126.[8]

Since New York State has very high campaign contribution limits, candidates focus their fundraising on those who can give the most—and those individuals and entities frequently have business before the government. For example, between 3/5 and 2/3 of all the money entering the political system comes from lobbying firms or their clients.[9]

In addition, New York's sky-high contribution levels have fueled a shift away from smaller donors toward reliance on bigger ones. This reliance undermines the public's involvement in a system that can only be described as a money chase. Whether the as-yet-untested system of public financing offsets this money chase will be seen sometime in the future.

Recommendation #2: Place meaningful limits on donations to "housekeeping accounts"

New York exempts from contribution limits donations to so-called "housekeeping" accounts for "party building activities."[10] There have been widespread abuses of this exemption. Candidates for office must use campaign contributions for all of their administrative costs and the same should be true for the political parties. The housekeeping loophole has allowed donors to circumvent New York's already-weak campaign limits. New York must place meaningful limits on "housekeeping accounts."

Recommendation #3: Prohibit campaign donations from vendors seeking or engaged in state procurement

The notion that those receiving government contracts can be restricted is not a new concept. The Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC), for example, has enacted a pay-to-play rule.[11] The rule, under the Investment Advisers Act of 1940, prohibits an investment adviser from providing services, directly or indirectly, to a government entity in exchange for a compensation for two years after the adviser or an employee or an executive makes contributions to political campaigns of a candidate or an elected official, above a certain threshold.

Moreover, the rule prohibits an investment adviser or an employee or an executive from providing or agreeing to provide payments to a third party, on behalf of the adviser, in order to seek business from a government entity. The only exception to this is if the third party is a registered broker dealer or a registered investment adviser, in which case the party will be subjected to the pay-to-play restrictions.[12]

Recommendation #4: Require the disclosure of campaign finance "bundlers."
While lobbyists give large amounts of money directly from their bank accounts, they can deliver even more through "bundling" money on behalf of their clients. Participants in this practice multiply their political contributions and influence by aggregating checks written by members, clients, or associates. Other governments, notably New York City's, require committees to disclose which of their donations were bundled and by whom.[13] Bundling is a key way in which lobby firms magnify their influence and ingratiate themselves to decision makers. It is difficult, however, to establish exact numbers reflecting the extent of this process. New Yorkers deserve to know which interests have bought access to their elected officials; complete disclosure of bundling is the only way for them to do so.

A brazen example of New York's disgraceful campaign financing system is that it allows elected officials to solicit lobbyists for donations while the legislature is considering new laws and while the executive is considering new regulations.

There is nothing more unsettling for those of us who believe in democracy and representative government than lobbyists forking over campaign dollars to elected officials at night while they ask for favors during the day.

As a Court stated when it upheld the unique campaign contribution restrictions found in the state of Tennessee's law:

> "Any payment made by a lobbyist to a public official, whether a campaign contribution or simply a gift, calls into question the propriety of the relationship." [The U.S. Court of Appeals for the 4th Circuit, Preston v. Leake, 660 F.3d 726, 737 (4th Cir. 2011).]

Recommendation #5: Restrict contributions from lobbyists
However, limits should not be placed solely on those seeking government contracts with the executive branch. A number of states place restrictions on campaign contributions from lobbyists, particularly during the legislative session. According to the National Conference of State Legislatures, 18 states have restrictions on campaign contributions by lobbyists,

[13] New York City Administrative Code Section 3-701 (12) defines bundlers as follows: "The term 'intermediary' shall mean an individual, corporation, partnership, political committee, employee organization or other entity which, (i) other than in the regular course of business as a postal, delivery or messenger service, delivers any contribution from another person or entity to a candidate or authorized committee; or (ii) solicits contributions to a candidate or other authorized committee where such solicitation is known to such candidate or his or her authorized committee."

with 12 of those states prohibiting lobbyists from making campaign contributions during the legislative session.[14]

Currently, lobbyists play a central role in funding the campaigns of candidates for state office and then circling back once they are elected to plead for favors. This situation places elected officials in an untenable situation and creates an obvious conflict of interest. While the documentation of this has been overwhelming and goes back decades, recent media reports underscore lobbyists' fundraising for the governor.

Recent media reports have disclosed that Albany's lobbying elite have rushed to fund the governor's re-election effort, one describing how "Albany lobbying firms like Bolton St. Johns and Mercury Public Affairs jockeyed to hold private fund-raisers for the governor within weeks of her taking office."[15]

Of course, lobbyists and their clients do not view their contributions as charitable—they want something in return. And they must believe they get it or they would not continue to do so. Due to U.S. Supreme Court decisions, there is little that can be done to turn off the spigot of special interest money, but narrow restrictions can be accomplished. Restrict lobbyists so that their role in lawmaking is one in which they are measured by the depth of their legislative knowledge, not the width of their wallets.

METHODOLOGY

All the numbers contained in this report are based on databases available at www.elections.ny.gov. These were downloaded in July 2026, and do not reflect any late or amended filings submitted after this date. The validity of all the data is dependent on the accuracy of committee treasurers and the oversight of the State Board of Elections.

The New York State Board of Elections requires candidates and political committees to provide a detailed list of all contributions.[16] These reports allow the public to better understand who is funding the elections of candidates for state and local elected offices. This report specifically reviewed contributions to the state and legislative party committees for calendar years 2022-2025 and the first half of 2026 (the most recent data available).

We downloaded the campaign finance reports for each of the four legislative committees as well as the state party committees for each of the two major political parties. We sorted by the amount contributed or donated and the top 10 percent of the number of discrete donors. In our analyses, we combined campaign contributions to the relevant party committee as well as transfers from other political committees to the identified party committees.

DEFINITIONS[17]

Under New York State election law, a "political committee" is the all-encompassing term for any organized spending to influence an election or ballot question. As defined, a political committee "means any corporation aiding or promoting and any committee, political club or combination of one or more persons operating or co-operating to aid or to promote the success or defeat of a political party or principle, or of any ballot proposal; or to aid or take part in the election or defeat of a candidate for public office or to aid or take part in the election or defeat of a candidate for nomination at a primary election or convention, including all proceedings prior to such primary election, or of a candidate for any party position voted for at a primary election, or to aid or defeat the nomination by petition of an independent candidate for public office; but nothing in this article shall apply to any committee or organization for the discussion or advancement of political questions or principles without connection with any vote or to a national committee organized for the election of presidential or vice-presidential candidates; provided, however, that a person or corporation making a contribution or contributions to a candidate or a political committee which has filed pursuant to section 14–118 shall not, by that fact alone, be deemed to be a political committee as herein defined."

Within that definition are specific types of political committees. This report examined one type, the "party committee." According to New York law, a party committee "means any committee provided for in the rules of the political party in accordance with section two one hundred of this chapter, other than a constituted committee."

A "candidate" means an individual who seeks nomination for election, or election, to any public office or party position to be voted for at a primary, general or special or New York city community school district election or election for trustee of the Long Island Power Authority, whether or not the public office or party position has been specifically identified at such time and whether or not such individual is nominated or elected, and, for purposes of this subdivision, an individual shall be deemed to seek nomination for election, or election, to an office or position, if he has (1) taken the action necessary to qualify himself for nomination for election, or election, or (2) received contributions or made expenditures, given his consent for any other person to receive contributions or make expenditures, with a view to bringing about his nomination for election, or election, to any office or position at any time whether in the year in which such contributions or expenditures are made or at any other time."

Under New York law, a "contribution" means: (1) any gift, subscription, outstanding loan (to the extent provided for in section 14–114 of this chapter), advance, or deposit of money or anything of value, made in connection with the nomination for election, or election, of any candidate, or made to promote the success or defeat of a political party or principle, or of any ballot proposal, (2) any funds received by a political committee from another political committee to the extent such funds do not constitute a transfer, (3) any payment, by any person other than a candidate or a political committee authorized by the candidate, made in connection with the nomination for election or election of any candidate, including any payment or expenditure where coordination has occurred as defined in section 14–107 of this article, or any payment made to promote the success or defeat of a political party or principle, or of any ballot proposal including but not limited to compensation for the personal services of any individual which are rendered in connection with a candidate's election or nomination without charge; provided however, that none of the foregoing shall be deemed a contribution if it is made, taken or performed by a candidate or his spouse or by a person or a political committee independent of the candidate or his agents or authorized political committees." However, the contributions "shall not include a party committee supporting the candidate of such party or a constituted committee supporting the candidate of such party."[18]

"Transfers" of money from one political committee to another are different from a "contribution." According to New York law, "transfer'' means any exchange of funds or anything of value between political committees authorized by the same candidate and taking part solely in his campaign, or any exchange of funds between a party or constituted committee and a candidate or any of his authorized political committees."

Donations to party committees' "housekeeping accounts" can be any amount.[19] Spending through "housekeeping accounts" are exempt from the "contribution and receipt limits of this article shall not apply to monies received and expenditures made by a party committee or constituted committee to maintain a permanent headquarters and staff and carry on ordinary activities which are not for the express purpose of promoting the candidacy of specific candidates; provided that such monies described in this subdivision shall be deposited in a segregated account."[20]

As used in this section the term "contributor'' shall not include a party committee supporting the candidate of such party or a constituted committee supporting the candidate of such party. This table[21] lists Campaign Finance Contribution Non-Family and Family Limit Formulas based on Statewide Offices and Election:

| Office | Election | Column A: Non-Family Limit | Column B: Family Limit |
|---|---|---|---|
| Statewide (Governor, Lieutenant Governor, Attorney General, Comptroller) | Primary | $9,000 | Total number of enrolled voters in the candidate's party in the state, excluding voters in inactive status, multiplied by $0.025. |
| | General | $9,000* | Total number of registered voters in the state, excluding voters in inactive status, multiplied by $0.025 |
| New York State Senate | Primary | $5,000 | Total number of enrolled voters in the candidate's party in the district, excluding voters in inactive status, multiplied by $0.25, but at least $20,000, and no more than $100,000. |
| | General | $5,000 | Total number of registered voters in the candidate's district, excluding voters in inactive status, multiplied by $0.25, but at least $20,000, and no more than $100,000. |
| New York State Assembly | Primary | $3,000 | Total number of enrolled voters in the candidate's party in the district, excluding voters in inactive status, multiplied by $0.25, but at least $12,500, and no more than $100,000. |
| | General | $3,000 | Total number of registered voters in the candidate's district, excluding voters in inactive status, multiplied by $0.25, but at least $12,500, and no more than $100,000. |
